Important Disclosure

There are two sources of UBS research. One source is written by UBS Wealth Management Research (“WMR”). WMR is published by UBS Wealth Management Americas (the UBS business group that includes, among others, UBS Financial Services Inc. and UBS International Inc.) and by UBS Wealth Management & Swiss Bank, whose primary business focus is individual investors. The WMR report style, length and content are designed to be more easily used by individual investors. The second source is written by UBS Investment Research. UBS Investment Research is published by UBS Investment Bank, whose primary business focus is institutional investors.

The research reports may include estimates and forecasts. A forecast is just one element of an overall report. Due to a divergence of opinions, there may sometimes be differences between the individual and institutional reports, with respect to interest rate or exchange rate forecasts. The analysts who prepare individual and institutional research use their own methodologies and assumptions to make their independent forecasts. Neither the institutional forecast nor the individual forecast is necessarily more reliable than the other.

The various research content provided does not take into account the unique investment objectives, financial situation or particular needs of any specific individual investor. If you have any questions, please consult your Financial Advisor.

UBS Financial Services Inc. is a subsidiary of UBS AG and an affiliate of UBS International Inc. In Canada, UBS Wealth Management Research is provided by UBS Investment Management Canada Inc.
